Message from the Chair

I am honored to have been asked to serve as Chair of the Board and want to begin by acknowledging the service of two members of the board who recently passed away. Dan Hazen of Harvard University passed away in June, 2015, and his loss will be deeply felt for years by CRL and the entire research library community. More recently, my immediate predecessor, Richard Fyffe, passed away in November. The CRL community will greatly miss Richard, who will be remembered for his dedicated and energetic leadership as chair over the last two years. During that time, CRL continued to flourish and to fulfill its mission to its members thanks to Richard’s exceptional service.

“Transparency” is a particularly apt theme for CRL, given its primary mission of ensuring the survival and availability of primary source materials vital to cutting-edge research in the Humanities and Social Sciences. To that end, for the second year in a row, the Board of Directors has approved investments to further CRL’s mission and strategic goals. Those investments will be directed toward enhancing the digitization of materials and document delivery, increasing CRL’s membership base, and expanding and strengthening CRL’s institutional connections.

In the increasingly crowded and noisy internet space, we also need to make sure that interested individuals and institutions can find their way to CRL and once they are there find precisely what they need. CRL’s internet presence has improved considerably in the last year and further enhancements will be undertaken. In addition, CRL provides a critical service in offering informed analysis of digital collections and repositories. CRL’s eDesiderata licensing platform provides a welcome and useful interactive space for sharing assessments of e-resources and opening those resources to broad scrutiny.

Preservation is in itself a form of transparency, ensuring the availability of materials for researchers now and in the future. For example, CRL, supported by The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation and the Institute of Museum and Library Services, has taken a leading role in assessing the state of newspaper digitization and preservation and in convening libraries, funding agencies, aggregators and news outlets to set the agenda for digitization and preservation. Similarly, CRL has championed the preservation of public records that cast light on governmental operations here and abroad.

Transparency also applies to the way in which CRL operates and is governed. The Board has worked with Bernard Reilly to develop its strategic budgetary goals for the year, and to ensure they align with the needs of the membership. The health of CRL has been underscored by the growth in new members and by participation on the board. I want to thank the departing Board members this past year: Charles Henry, President of the Council on Library and Information Resources; and Leslie Weir, University Chief Librarian at the University of Ottawa. Both outgoing directors served two three-year terms, and Leslie Weir served as vice chair of the Board. CRL is indebted to Chuck and Leslie for their advocacy of the Center and of research libraries in general.

Change in many forms inevitably affects all organizations, and I am proud of the way that CRL has responded to these changes and remained true to its mission over the past year.

Scott Waugh
Executive Vice Chancellor and Provost,
University of California, Los Angeles
Transparency is the keynote of this year’s report. In one sense, the term pertains to how libraries serving researchers and scholars must navigate in an environment where important documentation and evidence is increasingly managed by others. As online access to more information is maintained by third parties (publishers, government agencies, digital preservation repositories like CLOCKSS, and commercial providers of cloud services), transparency becomes more critical. This year CRL continued to support libraries’ due diligence, by evaluating the workings of the major providers to ensure that member investment yields a fair return for researchers. And as libraries increasingly turn to each other to cooperatively maintain and deliver shared print collections, CRL expanded its support for print archives and shared print through its Print Archive Network Forums, and the PAPR and ICON summits.

Transparency is also a core aspiration at CRL. Being open and straightforward about our goals and priorities is how we earn the trust of our community. This year’s accomplishments owe a great deal to the investment of time, energy and resources by many individuals working “in plain sight” in the community. Representatives of four university libraries (Duke, Waterloo, Arizona, and Cornell) served on the advisory panel for CRL’s audit of CLOCKSS; subject specialists at major research universities like Florida and UC Berkeley led area studies preservation projects; and many more librarians nominated the major microform collections acquired by CRL this year.

One individual who exemplified the spirit of the enterprise was Dan Hazen of Harvard University. Dan passed away this spring after a rich and productive career in area studies and collection development. Some of us at CRL had the privilege of working closely with Dan, a passionate advocate for Latin American collections. Dan’s connection to CRL dates back to early in his career as Latin American Studies Librarian at Cornell University. Dan represented Cornell then on the Latin American Microform Project, and in the years since assumed a larger role in LAMP, guiding its preservation activities as its chair from 1992 to 1998. As a CRL Board member and chair of CRL’s Collections and Services Policy Committee since 2012, Dan shaped CRL’s collecting and preservation agenda. We will miss his wisdom and generosity.

This year support from The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, The Carnegie Corporation of New York, and the National Endowment for the Humanities were indispensable to the work of CRL. But as ever, CRL remains a cooperative enterprise driven and supported by its members: libraries committed to the integrity and availability of documentation critical to original research and inspired teaching.

Every year a number of communities of interest work under the CRL umbrella to preserve important, and often at-risk, documentation from various world regions. CRL provides administrative support for these programs and promotes cross-fertilization and operational economies of scale, and makes the resources they develop available to researchers. The Area Materials Projects, longstanding cooperative programs, employ both digital conversion and microformatting to capture and deliver source materials. As support for foreign acquisitions at the Library of Congress and other research libraries erodes, CRL is increasing its investment to compensate.

This year these programs were unusually productive, preserving and/or digitizing newspapers and archives from nations in Africa, South Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East, many of them political trouble spots. In addition, the TRAIL project continues to scan and harvest technical publications produced by various U.S. government agencies.

Project Ceres, a partnership with the United States Agriculture Information Network (USAIN) and the Agriculture Network Information Center (AgNIC), continues to support the preservation and digitization of historical collections in the field of agriculture. A third round of Project Ceres funding was awarded this year to support digitization of agricultural extension and experiment station publications from nine institutions. Participants commit to archiving the print originals, and provide CRL copies of the digital versions.

The civil wars, foreign invasions, and bloodshed that have plagued Afghanistan for nearly a century have also destroyed much of the documentation of that nation’s modern history.

An important trove of surviving materials assembled by the Library of Congress Field Office in Islamabad has now been preserved by CRL through the joint efforts of the Middle Eastern Materials Project (MEMP) and the South Asia Materials Project (SAMP). The collection of materials, in Pushto, Persian, and Dari languages, has been microfilmed and some items have also been digitized.

The LC field offices locate and collect hard-to-acquire materials for the benefit of policymakers and scholars in the U.S. and around the world. Without CRL’s efforts, LC’s remarkable achievement of amassing the Afghan materials might have been diminished, notes Judy Alspach, CRL’s area studies program manager. “Some of the documents had been acquired decades ago, and so were in danger of deteriorating,” says Alspach. They could have been lost at a time when insights to be gained from the mix of cultural perspectives in this beleaguered nation could be crucial.

“The lengthy runs of some publications are particularly notable given the political circumstances,” says Alspach. For example, the Ministry of Information and Culture published Pushtun Zhagh, the official organ of Kabul Radio, from 1942 to 1977. This period spanned the monarchy of Zahir Shah; the rise of General Mohammed Daoud, who as prime minister more closely allied Afghanistan with the Soviet Union; and events leading to Daoud’s ultimate overthrow and establishment of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan in 1978. Avaz, a continuation of the Ministry’s publication, is represented in holdings from 1985–1995. That period saw the Soviet-Afghan war, early U.S. intervention, and the rise of the Taliban. Other materials preserved from this era include a partial run of the Kabul newspaper Jogah.

Without CRL’s preservation efforts, the Library of Congress’s remarkable achievement of amassing the materials in the first place might have been diminished.

THE IMPACT OF CRL: Afghan Documentation Spans Tumultuous Century

Expanding Access to Research Materials

This year CRL filled 15% fewer loan requests for member institutions than in FY 2014, and loaned 23% fewer items, but saw an increase of 8% in filled document delivery requests. This suggests that more researchers are taking advantage of online access to CRL material. Among the top users of CRL collections were Harvard University, McGill, and the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. Heaviest use of the Linda Hall document delivery service came from the University of Minnesota, the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, and St. Olaf College.

CRL digitization programs reached a new level of production: more than 650,000 new pages were scanned on request for researchers; and over four million pages were produced through special projects and collaborative efforts. The latter include official gazettes of ten African and Middle East nations where the integrity of the public record is known to be at risk, scanned with support from the Carnegie Corporation of New York. CRL digitization focuses on primary source materials not available from other sources.

To accommodate the rapidly growing amount of digital content CRL is generating and acquiring, the CRL network, servers and content management infrastructure were upgraded. The CRL Digital Delivery System platform is now more easily navigable, and interacts with enhanced user authentication solutions, allowing off-campus users to access CRL member-only materials through Shibboleth and Proxy login.

CRL renewed its partnership with the Law Library Microform Consortium (LLMC).

Under this program CRL’s legislative journals from 30 states have now been digitized, as well as historical and contemporary legal publications from countries in Africa, Latin America, South and Southeast Asia, and other jurisdictions. Researchers at CRL institutions can access those collections and a vast array of additional material through the LLMC Digital database.

Seven member libraries pooled funds through the Shared Purchase program to help CRL enrich its newspaper holdings from Japan, Montreal, and Minnesota. CRL thanks the following member libraries for their contributions:

• Carleton College
• University of Michigan
• Ohio University
• University of Pennsylvania
• Stanford University
• University of Washington
• University of Wisconsin - Madison

The 2015 Purchase Proposal voting resulted in CRL acquiring over $200,000 worth of microform and reprint collections, including newspapers from Algeria and Vietnam, and archival collections from China, the United States, and the Church Missionary Society.

CRL’s licensing activity continued to increase, to enable libraries to provide researchers specialized and critical documentation in electronic form, particularly in the areas of news, financial information, and other primary sources. Overall in FY15, CRL negotiated 33 offers for member database purchases from a wide range of publishers, with a total of 250 resources taken up by 115 different CRL libraries.

Decades after administrative clerks carefully noted transactions between the Colonial Offices of the British Empire and the Malay States in the 1920s and 1930s, Harvard Fellow Diana Kim turned to these records to understand the dynamics of a robust opium trade between producers in British India and consumers in Southeast Asia in the late 19th and early 20th century. She sought to learn more about the conditions that led to opium’s eventual transition from a legal commodity to a prohibited substance.

Dr. Kim discovered the archival materials held by CRL while conducting research at the British Library in 2010 for her PhD dissertation at the University of Chicago, Empire’s Penal Turn: The Rise of Opium Prohibition in Mainland Southeast Asia, 1870–1935. Her research has expanded to a book-length project now under consideration by a university press.

“I had originally focused on British Burma, but for the book I have expanded the comparative focus to British Malaya and French Indochina,” she noted. “CRL staff members were very kind in helping me locate what I needed, pointing to microfilm holdings of possible interest at CRL. They were particularly helpful in putting together a list of colonial budget records for the British-ruled Straits Settlements.”

Her goal was to connect the dots—to trace how colonial revenue incentives competed with emerging acknowledgement of the dangers of widespread opium use. Before international conventions outlawed the opium trade altogether by the mid-1930s, prohibition measures were implemented incrementally and inconsistently.

“The primary sources I accessed through CRL are useful for excavating the anxieties that European state builders encountered in non-European settings with regard to opium smuggling and illicit consumption,” said Dr. Kim. “The multiple resources that CRL provides—government gazettes, newspapers, administrative reports, departmental correspondences—are invaluable for triangulating the ideas that actors held at the time and the economic realities they occupied. For me, the broader stakes to excavating ‘hidden’ activities and actors in the archives is to understand why prohibition happened when it did, the way it did.”
Throughout the year CRL provides a variety of resources and opportunities to support informed investment in collections by member libraries. This year CRL conducted seven webinars on topics like licensing, text and data mining, and large economic databases. CRL also evaluated the workings of major digital providers to ensure that member investment in them provides a fair return for researchers. In July 2014, CRL released the findings of its preservation audit of the CLOCKSS (Controlled LOCKSS) archive of e-journals. As a community-governed repository serving and supported by a large number of CRL libraries, CLOCKSS is a significant component of the critical preservation infrastructure for scholarly and scientific communications.

CRL also convened gatherings to consider the state of preservation in two key domains: newspapers and print journals. In April, Framing a Common Agenda for Newspaper Digitization and Preservation: an ICON Summit brought together representatives of national and academic libraries, publishers and aggregators of news content, and funding organizations in an international gathering at the National Library of Sweden. To inform the discussions, CRL produced two discussion papers prior to the summit. The first, State of the Art: A Comparative Analysis of Newspaper Digitization to Date, identified the limitations of the major newspaper digitization efforts in the United States and Europe. Data from the ICON database revealed that these efforts are not concentrating on the most at-risk materials, such as publications on deteriorating paper and those issued in unstable and developing regions. Newspaper digitization efforts funded by major efforts such as the Europeana Library, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and commercial publishers focus instead primarily on titles from developed countries, many of which have been microfilmed.

The second study examined the content management capabilities and practices of major news databases, and identified the types of information needed by libraries and publishers to make informed decisions on management and digitization of newspapers. In consultation with some of the attending organizations, CRL is pursuing measures to correct these imbalances, and continues to press the issues with the publishers, funders, and libraries.

In June, CRL convened Preserving America’s Print Resources II at the University of California, Berkeley. The purpose of PAPR II was to determine how CRL can further support the archiving and sharing of print serial collections by North American libraries. One striking revelation of the summit was that, as of December 2014, fewer than two in every one hundred periodical titles held by U.S. and Canadian libraries were archived—even in part—by a recognized print archiving program. Roger Schonfeld of Ithaka S+R, in his capstone remarks, made the sobering observation that “while we may have developed a strong network for managing down print, whether that will yield long-term preservation goals is quite another matter.” CRL will outline solution proposals early in FY 2016.
From the violent political upheavals in Ukraine in the 1930s and 1940s some 200,000 émigrés emerged, choosing to live in exile in Germany and other Western European countries after World War II instead of returning to the Soviet Union. Wherever they settled, they began organizing around civic, educational, and cultural interests, producing newsletters, pamphlets, and other documentation to connect and inform their various communities.

In July 2015, the Slavic and East European Materials Project at CRL (SEEMP) completed digitization of the Ukrainian Émigré Press Collection, encompassing some 90 titles published between 1945–1954, and now dispersed in holdings at Harvard University, the University of Toronto, and the Ukrainian Free Academy of Sciences in New York City.

These publications provide texture and detail about how a group of displaced people carried on with their personal and professional lives in the first decade after the war, including holding art exhibitions in refugee camps or compiling a guide to opportunities for continuing medical training in Germany. “Some of the titles had limited runs and were in poor condition, making them difficult to access or decipher,” said Judy Alspach, CRL’s area studies program manager. “In digitized format, scholars will have a clearer view into the daily lives of these émigrés.”

“CRL’s role in uniting these three distinctive holdings was incredibly important. . . The CRL platform allows us to unite the journal titles under a single access point.”

Center for Research Libraries

Report on the Financial Statements
We have audited the accompanying financial statements of Center for Research Libraries (the Center), which comprise the statements of financial position as of June 30, 2015 and 2014 and the related statements of activities and of cash flows for the years then ended, and the related notes to the financial statements.

Management's Responsibility for the Financial Statements
Management is responsible for the preparation and fair presentation of these financial statements in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America; this includes the design, implementation, and maintenance of internal control relevant to the preparation and fair presentation of financial statements that are free from material misstatement, whether due to fraud or error.

Auditors' Responsibility
Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audits. We conducted our audits in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audits to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free from material misstatement.

An audit involves performing procedures to obtain audit evidence about the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. The procedures selected depend on the auditor's judgment, including the assessment of the risks of material misstatement of the financial statements, whether due to fraud or error. In making those risk assessments, the auditor considers internal control relevant to the entity's preparation and fair presentation of the financial statements in order to design audit procedures that are appropriate in the circumstances, but not for the purpose of expressing an opinion on the effectiveness of the Center's internal control. Accordingly, we express no such opinion. An audit also includes evaluating the appropriateness of accounting policies used and the reasonableness of significant accounting estimates made by the Center's management, as well as evaluating the overall presentation of the financial statements.

We believe that the audit evidence we have obtained is sufficient and appropriate to provide a basis for our audit opinion.
Opinion
In our opinion, the financial statements referred to in the first paragraph present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Center for Research Libraries as of June 30, 2015 and 2014, and the changes in its net assets and its cash flows for the years then ended, in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.

Other Matter
Our audits were conducted for the purpose of forming an opinion on the financial statements as a whole. The accompanying supplementary information on pages 16 through 18 is presented for purposes of additional analysis and is not a required part of the financial statements. Such information is the responsibility of management and was derived from and relates directly to the underlying accounting and other records used to prepare the financial statements. The information has been subjected to the auditing procedures applied in the audits of the financial statements and certain additional procedures, including comparing and reconciling such information directly to the underlying accounting and other records used to prepare the financial statements or to the financial statements themselves, and other additional procedures in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. In our opinion, the information is fairly stated in all material respects in relation to the financial statements as a whole.

Note 1. Nature of Activities

Center for Research Libraries (the Center) is a membership consortium of institutions with significant academic and research libraries. The Center's mission is to foster and advance scholarly and scientific research through cost-effective, cooperative programs that provide reliable access through traditional and electronic means to unique and unusual collections of library materials in all appropriate formats, international in scope and comprehensive in disciplines.

A majority of the Center's revenue is derived from membership cost share assessments. Other revenue and support consist of grants and sales of materials reproduced.

The following provides a brief description of the Center's program services:

Collections Storage and Maintenance - The Center maintains active and inactive collections consisting of an estimated five million volumes or equivalents in its repository facility. These collections are in paper, microform and electronic media. Activities associated with storage and physical maintenance of the Center's film and paper collections include sorting, shelving, labeling, housing, and binding conservation work. Also included are the costs of maintaining, monitoring and improving the portion of the building dedicated to collections storage, including climate control and other functions.

Acquisitions - This program consists of activities supporting the acquisition and processing of collection materials, including surveying of members on collection needs, selection and subscription costs, ordering, transporting and receiving materials.

Conversion of Materials - The Center preserves unique and at-risk cultural and historical materials through microfilming and digital conversion. Materials are organized, analyzed, collated and shipped to and from service providers by the Center and partner organizations. Film and digital copies are produced and distributed.

Service and Delivery - The Center delivers an estimated 33 million pages of collection materials to member institutions and other clients each year. Activities include receiving and processing requests for the Center's collection materials from member libraries and clients, retrieval and preparation of materials for delivery, shipping, fulfillment of electronic document delivery requests, receipt and re-shelving of returned materials and fulfillment and processing of member purchase requests for individual items.

Cataloging and Metadata - This program involves production and processing of preliminary and final catalog records, finding aids for the Center’s collection materials and metadata for electronic resources including those produced and/or acquired by the Center.

Area Microform Projects (AMPS) - This program involves specific support for the Area Microform Projects and other self-funded area studies projects undertaken by the Center for partner organizations. Activities include identification and procurement of materials for preservation, microfilming and digitization as well as conversion and cataloging of those materials.

Grants - The Center receives grants to fund preservation, cataloging, union lists, acquisitions and other activities, either independently or as a partner in cooperative projects. These grants are normally from private philanthropies or from the U.S. federal government.

NOTE 2. SUMMARY OF SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

Basis of Accounting - The Center’s financial statements have been prepared on the accrual basis of accounting in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

Financial Statement Presentation - In order to conform to provisions of generally accepted accounting principles, the Center, as a not-for-profit entity, is required to report information regarding its financial position and activities in three classes of net assets: unrestricted, temporarily restricted, and permanently restricted. Net assets are generally reported as unrestricted unless assets are received from donors with explicit stipulations that limit the use of the asset. The Center has determined that no net assets are permanently restricted as of June 30, 2015 and 2014. Voluntary resolutions by the Board of Directors to designate a portion of the Center’s unrestricted net assets for specific purposes do not result in restricted funds. Since designations are voluntary and may be reversed by the Board at any time, Board designated net assets are considered unrestricted net assets.

Cash and Cash Equivalents - Short-term interest bearing cash are considered to be investments.

Investments - The investments of the Center are reported at fair value. The fair value of a financial instrument is the amount that would be received to sell that asset (or paid to transfer a liability) in an orderly transaction between market participants at the measurement date (the exit price). Purchases and sales of the investments are reflected on a trade-date basis. Dividend income is recorded on the ex dividend date. Interest income is recorded on the accrual basis.
NOTE 2. SUMMARY OF SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES (CONTINUED)

Accounts and Grants Receivable - Accounts and grants receivable are stated at the amounts that the Center expects to collect from outstanding balances. Bad debts, which are typically minimal, are written off as incurred.

Deferred Financing Costs - The costs incurred in obtaining the Center’s loan have been deferred and are being amortized over the life of the loan.

Property and Equipment - Property and equipment with a cost in excess of $1,000 and a useful life greater than one year are recorded at cost and depreciated using the straight-line method over the estimated useful lives of the assets. Estimated lives range from three to ten years for furniture and equipment and thirty years for building and improvements. Upon sale or retirement, the cost and related accumulated depreciation are eliminated from the respective accounts and the resulting gain or loss is included in the statements of activities. Property and equipment are reviewed for impairment when events or changes in circumstances indicate that the carrying amount of the assets may not be recoverable. There were no impairment charges for the years ended June 30, 2015 or June 30, 2014.

Collections - The Center has an extensive collection of library materials, which is held for research purposes. The materials were acquired through purchases and contributions since the Center’s inception. The Center has adopted a policy of not capitalizing collection expenditures in its financial statements.

Purchases of collection items are recorded as decreases in unrestricted net assets in the year in which the items are acquired and a release of temporarily restricted net assets if acquired with such funds. Contributed collection items are not reflected in the financial statements. Proceeds from disposals or insurance recoveries are reflected as increases in the appropriate net asset class.

The collections are subject to a policy that requires proceeds from their sales to be used to acquire other collection items. No collection items were disposed of through sales during the years ended June 30, 2015 and 2014.

Due to Database Vendors - Beginning in 2013 the Center began acting as a conduit on behalf of the members by collecting and then remitting database vendor subscription premiums on their behalf. Payments received in advance are accounted for as due to database vendors at year end.

Grants and Contributions - Grants and contributions received are recorded as unrestricted or temporarily restricted support, depending on the existence and nature of any donor-imposed restrictions on the use of the funds. Contributions reported as temporarily restricted support are released to unrestricted net assets when the donor restriction expires, that is, when a stipulated time restriction ends or a purpose restriction is accomplished, and are reported in the statements of activities as net assets released from restrictions.

Revenue Recognition - Membership cost share assessments are recognized as revenue during the membership year. Dues received in advance of the membership year are accounted for as deferred revenue at year end. Revenue from cost reimbursement type grants is recognized as grant related costs are incurred. Grant funds received in advance are accounted for as deferred revenue. AMPS funds received for projects during the year are recognized as unrestricted revenue. Those AMPS funds received in advance of the project year are accounted for as deferred revenue.

Allocation of Expenses - The costs of providing the Center's various programs and supporting services have been summarized on a functional basis in the statements of activities. Accordingly, certain costs have been allocated among the programs and supporting services on the basis of management estimates of direct salary expenses, physical space occupied and programs benefited.

Income Taxes - The Center is exempt from federal income taxes under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code. Accordingly, there is no provision for income taxes recorded in the accompanying financial statements.

The Center files Form 990, Return of Organization Exempt from Income Tax. The Center's returns are subject to examination by the Internal Revenue Service until the applicable statute of limitations expires.

Management Estimates and Assumptions - The preparation of financial statements in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the amounts reported in the financial statements and accompanying notes. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

Reclassifications - Certain reclassifications have been made to prior year amounts to conform to the presentation for the current year.

Subsequent Events - Subsequent events have been evaluated through December 4, 2015, which is the date the financial statements were available to be issued.

NOTE 4. FAIR VALUE MEASUREMENTS

The Fair Value Measurements and Disclosures Topic of the FASB Accounting Standards Codification established a fair value hierarchy that prioritizes the inputs to valuation techniques used to measure fair value. The hierarchy gives the highest priority to unadjusted quoted prices in active markets for identical assets or liabilities (Level 1 measurements) and the lowest priority to unobservable inputs (Level 3 measurements). The three levels of the fair value hierarchy are described below.

Basis of Fair Value Measurement

- Level 1: Unadjusted quoted prices in active markets that are accessible at the measurement date for identical, unrestricted assets or liabilities
- Level 2: Quoted prices in markets that are not considered to be active or financial instruments for which all significant inputs are observable, either directly or indirectly
- Level 3: Prices or valuations that require inputs that are both significant to the fair value measurement and unobservable

The following tables set forth, by level within the fair value hierarchy, the Center’s investment assets at fair value as of June 30, 2015 and 2014. As required, assets and liabilities are classified in their entirety based on the lowest level of input that is significant to the fair value measurement. The Center had no investment assets at fair value classified within Level 3 at June 30, 2015 and 2014.

Level 1 Measurements

The fair values of the mutual funds are determined by reference to the funds’ underlying assets, which are principally marketable equity and fixed income securities. Shares held in mutual funds are traded in active markets on national and international securities exchanges and are valued at closing prices on the last business day of each period presented.

Level 2 Measurements

The money market funds are valued at cost which approximates their fair value.

NOTE 5. PREPAID EXPENSES

Prepaid expenses consisted of the following as of June 30, 2015 and 2014:

In the course of cataloging its dissertations collection, the Center incurs usage fees to access the Online Computer Library Center, Inc. (OCLC) database. The Center is able to offset these fees from credits received from OCLC for the reciprocal use of the Center. As of June 30, 2015 and 2014 the Center has earned cumulative net credits of $2,251 and $6,201 respectively.

Net assets were released from donor restrictions by incurring expenses of $482,341 and $197,608 in 2015 and 2014, respectively. Grant contributions received that are not expended for their restricted purposes are refundable to the grantor. Temporarily restricted net assets at June 30, 2015 and 2014 were available for the following purposes:

NOTE 11. PENSION PLAN

The Center has established and made available to its employees a defined contribution money purchase pension plan. Under this plan, funds contributed by the Center and participating employees are used to purchase retirement annuity and life insurance contracts for the participants through the Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association and/or the College Retirement Equities Fund. Contributions made by the Center are based on participants’ compensation as defined by the plan. The Center’s contribution for the years ended June 30, 2015 and 2014 was $282,170 and $234,302 respectively.
NOTE 12. RELATED PARTY TRANSACTIONS

The Center earns cataloging revenue from OCLC and also purchases cataloging and other services from OCLC. Cataloging revenue was $44,634 and $17,876 during the years ended June 30, 2015 and 2014, respectively. Total services purchased from OCLC were approximately $47,343 and $64,804 for the years ended June 30, 2015 and 2014, respectively.

The Center also routinely provides membership services to educational institutions that employ members of the Board of Directors.

NOTE 13. CONCENTRATION OF CREDIT RISK

The Center maintains its cash balances in financial institutions deemed to be creditworthy. Balances are insured by FDIC up to $250,000 per financial institution. Balances may at times exceed insured limits. However, the balances are swept nightly into a money market account that is secured by U.S. Government bonds. The Center believes its credit risk to be minimal.
