– Cooperative Collection Development Programs
– Projects with members such as the Undergraduate Research Working Group
Research Project Support

Identifying material of interest to researchers
Reference Consultations

    (from Egypt and Lebanon)
  - Other English language materials
Reference Consultations

Outcomes include

• Identifying pieces needed using guides which can also lead to:

• Purchasing needed material via one of CRL’s purchasing programs

  - Student’s thesis was on Korean Missions
In order to meet the changing needs of scholars, CRL offers a new program on a trial basis: the Scholars' Access Program.

Each of these programs enables CRL libraries to make new source materials available to researchers at their institutions without incurring the costs of acquiring, cataloging, processing, and storing those materials. CRL’s Member Liaison & Outreach Services Director works with librarians, faculty, and students from member libraries to identify and select materials for addition to the shared CRL collections.

In response to strong interest expressed by members, CRL has provided Electronic Resource Offers (login required) to members who wish to participate.

The Undergraduate Research Working Group identifies small, focused collections of primary source material for digitization by CRL to support upper-level undergraduate coursework and instruction. The group also seeks to include unique material held by member libraries that complements the identified themes.

Examples of past collections include:

- World War II and the development of the bomb (The Manhattan Project)
- South and Southeast Asia music and dance materials

HISTORY

The group was initially formed as the Liberal Arts Interest Group in the summer of 2007, to work with faculty to identify broad topics and themes for seminars taught at multiple institutions. In 2009, the Undergraduate Research Work Group was renamed to reflect the new constituency, which includes representatives from mid-sized universities as well as liberal arts colleges.
