COPYRIGHT LIABILITY ASSESSMENT

Prepared for the
CENTER FOR RESEARCH LIBRARIES

by

Peter Jaszi
Emeritus Professor of Law
American University Law School

November 2017
“CRL’s digital programs qualify squarely as non-profit “educational” ones within the meaning of Sec. 107 of the Copyright Act.”
“In the most straightforward analysis, CRL’s activities are transformative . . . CRL serves a new and different audience from the ones to which the serials, public information, and ephemera in its collections originally were addressed.”
“. . . The documentary and informational character of the copyright material that CRL distributes on line clearly favors a finding of fair use.”
"Summing up, it is my opinion that application of the broadly accepted consensus approach to fair use analysis in today’s federal courts would arrive without difficulty at the conclusion that CRL’s digitization and targeted document delivery activities fall categorically within the scope of the fair use doctrine."
Research and Development Tier I funding

- Partial support of the planning phase

- An effort to mine the bibliographic and other records produced by major humanities preservation microfilming programs and digitization efforts

- Data to inform library decision-making on the management of print today.

Licensing: Sustaining Access to News

James Simon, Vice President, Collections & Services
CRL Licensing Milestones

2007  Licensing for GRN programs
2010  CRL-wide licensing program initiated
2011  LIBLICENSE hosted by CRL
2013  NERL relocates to CRL
2013  eDesiderata online platform launched
2016  eDesiderata Forum inaugurated

Electronic Resource Offers through CRL, 2013-2017

- E-resource offers made
- CRL institutions taking up offers
• Access for all CRL libraries

• 300+ in-depth reviews of databases, websites, and tools for librarians, students, and faculty

• 20+ new and updated reviews monthly

http://www.ccadvisor.org
Conclusions: strengthening library effectiveness

- Collectivize dealings with vendors
- Forge library partnerships with non-commercial providers
- Provide greater support for individual library dealings
